- Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Nellie Bly was a newspaper reporter. When she read a book by Jules Verne titled “Around the World in Eighty Days”, she thought of a great newspaper story. She would make her own trip and do it in fewer than 80 days.

In 1889, a trip around the world was much harder than it is today. There were no airplanes or cars. There were only trains and ships. Also, women did not travel alone much during that time.

On November 14, 1889, Bly left New York City on a steamship called the Augusta Victoria. She only took one small handbag with her. Her only clothes were the ones she was wearing. On the first night, a terrible storm rocked the ship. She couldn't turn back because the world was watching. When Bly reached England, she learned that Jules Verne wanted to meet her. Bly was so excited to meet the famous author that she travelled to France, losing two nights of sleep to stay on schedule.

Bly took notes of the food she ate, the clothes people wore, the different languages she heard, and the different cultures she met. The newspaper published Bly's stories. Thousands of people around the world read them in the papers.

Bly reached San Francisco with 12 days left. She got on a train that raced across the country in 4 days. On January 25, 1890, she returned to New York City with thousands of cheering fans. Bly had travelled around the world in 72 days. It was a new world record!
